

Narratives of Globalization

INST 380A1

Summer Session: June 15th – August 7th
Dr. Foster, International Studies, CSU

Narratives, or stories, not only inform the way we understand the world, but can shape the world itself. This new course offers an interdisciplinary study of globalization through narrative, including stories, rhetoric, discourse, ideas, literature, and language about globalization.

We'll dive into relevant methods in international and global studies, and literary studies, which will deepen our knowledge of globalization and the world while promoting diversity and cultural awareness.
